THE PRESIDENT'S POLICY IN AP-POINTMENTS.

A New York Post Washington special says: The President, in a conversation with a Louisiana gentleman who called upon him recently, said that he had decided to adopt the Jeffersonian doctrine of changing all foreign Ministers who had been in office four years. In reading some of Jefferson's works he found this doctrine set forth at length, and it met with his unhesitating approval and would now constitute part of the policy of his Administration. No American citizen ought to serve his country in a foreign land longer than four years, and he ought to be content to return to his own country at the expiration of that term of service. President said further, that there would be no exception to this rule. It seems to be thought that Minister Pierrepont will not be disturbed for the present, he having been Minister only one year.
